Zim Israel: Problems, Problems, Problems, Including Liner Shalom, Kosher And Non-Kosher Ructions

The fire that tore through the five-story Zim Building in Tel Aviv on February 4 was only one of the many troubles besetting the Israeli shipping line. Insurance will probably cover much of the financial loss of the midtown office building, sixty-six per cent of which was owned by Zim, writes James Feron, from Jerusalem, for the New York Times. There is no insurance to cover the other problems.

Caught between a continuing loss in passenger traffic and a sharply critical report on its operations by the State Controller last fall, the country's largest steamship line has reorganized its fleet and has changed its management.

The new board met for the first time, headed by a new general manager, forty-two year-old Michael Tsour, a highly regarded Director General of the Ministry of Commerce and Industry for the last eight years.

Earlier, Israelis were told what the changes of the last few months would mean: The number of trans-Atlantic sailings would be cut by half this year, and almost all the traffic would be carried on two Greek Line ships.

The Greek Line is the only shipping company with regular service between North America and Israel. The Queen Anna Maria and the Olympia are scheduled for sixteen sailings. There will be one departure every two weeks during the vacation season and one a month at other times.

Zim's modern liner Shalom, used mostly as a cruise ship, will cross the Atlantic only four times. The Greek Line ships carry kosher kitchens as well as an attraction the Shalom did not have: non-kosher kitchens. When the Shalom operates on cruises, it serves international cuisine with the tacit approval of the Orthodox rabbinate.

The developments that prompted Zim to withdraw from scheduled passenger service were not Zim's alone. Trends in trans-Atlantic travel point skyward, and other steamship lines are facing the same problem, says the New York Times. The number of people crossing the Atlantic by air rose by twenty-five per cent recently while those by sea fell by ten per cent; on Israeli ships the drop was seven per cent.

But the Zim Israel Navigation Company of Haifa found other problems lapping at its door. One was the cost of a vast expansion program; another, a need to modernize cargo operations; third, a growing inability to find sailors in Israel.

Public attention was focused on the line last fall when its report for 1964 showed an operating loss for the first time, a deficit of $3-million. Some economists said the report showed a disguised loss for the previous year as well.

Most of the losses were in passenger service. The Shalom was competing in a shrinking market with the older passenger-cargo ships Zion and Israel, built in Germany under reparations agreements.

The line decided to sell the 10,000-ton combined vessels, to introduce fast new freighters to pick up the cargo business; and to concentrate the Shalom's efforts to cruise traffic.

The new express cargo service has been started. The freighters Etrog and Hadar will call at Naples and Barcelona on the way to New York; and at Barcelona and Piraeus on the way to Haifa.

WHAT TROUBLE IN THE MIDDLE EAST?: EXTEMPORE ISRAELI FLIER, LIVING A CHARMED LIFE, GOT TENDER CARE IN EGYPT; RETURNED AS THE ESSENCE OF "CHUZPAH" (NERVE), TO A BIG NATIONAL SMILE; WOULD DO IT AGAIN

Abie S. Nathan returned on March 1 to the tiny Israeli airfield from which he left the day before on his personal peace mission to the United Arab Republic.

The Tel Aviv restaurant owner and former commercial pilot brought his rented, single-engine biplane through the gathering dusk into Herzlia Airport, where he was cheered by a small crowd that had waited most of the day, writes James Feron in the New York Times. Two young men had to be dragged from the wings of the 39-year-old plane by airport officials.

The thirty-eight-year-old Mr. Nathan also was met by the police, who charged him with leaving the country illegally. However, he was released on a bond of £100 ($33). Mr. Nathan told the crowd he would do it again.

Mr. Nathan said he had left his Bible with the Governor of Port Said, where he had spent the night in a cell. He said the Governor had given him a pair of pajamas and miniature pyramids as souvenirs.

Mr. Nathan left for Tel Aviv in a horn-blowing motorcade. He stopped at the new Hilton Hotel, where he had been offered the presidential suite. "Hilton International believes in peace," an official said soberly.

At a boisterous news conference, Mr. Nathan said that Egyptian officials at first could not believe he had come from Israel.

"They received me very nicely, took me inside, gave me a glass of tea," he said. "They saw I was cold and brought around an electric stove and put it next to me so I should get warm."

He showed them an Arabic version of the peace petition he had distributed in Israel calling for face-to-face talks between Israeli and Arab officials, says the New York Times. They said it was "very nice," he reported.

"Then," he said, "the Governor of Port Said came in and said he had heard about me and said 'we're interested in peace, too, but it's not up to us. It's up to you.' Then he began talking about refugees, and I said: 'Don't talk about these things to me. I'm sure if you sit down with my Government you might come to some arrangement.'

"They said: 'No. The step must come from you. You must talk about these steps in your own home.'"

Mr. Nathan said the Governor had told him: "Your intentions are good. We will fill up your plane with gas and you will fly back."

"But how to spend the evening?" Mr. Nathan said. He said he had played cards with some security officers. "Of course, I won," he said, bringing a roar of laughter.

Later the Governor asked Mr. Nathan if he would like to see the city. "So I saw the Suez Canal and ships in the canal and a night club, which they said was not for me," he recalled.

Next morning they repaired the ancient plane's damaged tail, and Mr. Nathan, with a hearty shalom, took off. But a patch tore loose and he landed again.

"'Oi, we are not through,' they said," Mr. Nathan related.

During the second repair job he got into a discussion with the Governor, who chided the Israelis for reporting that Mr. Nathan had been killed on his flight. Mr. Nathan said he replied: "You also think that we have atom bombs in every corner. It's not true."

"You are making atom bombs?" the Governor asked.

"Just like you make them, we make them," Mr. Nathan replied.

Mr. Nathan's flight has delighted Israelis, and even Government officials had to smile at his stunt. Mr. Nathan was the embodiment of "chuzpah", says the New York Times, a Yiddish word that means nerve, to the point of effrontery.

Abie Nathan stories made the rounds most of the day. The favorite was that he would change the name of his plane from Shalom I to Shalom II and try his luck in Beirut, Lebanon.

The flier was regarded by some as well-meaning and naive, and by others as a dangerous exhibitionist whose escapade had made a mockery of any real peace feelers. A state of war prevails between Israel and the Arab countries.

In general he was regarded as extremely lucky not only to have left the United Arab Republic with little more than a pat on the head, but also to have survived two long flights in the old training plane.

Mr. Nathan and his Egyptian-born wife, Susie, co-owner of a discotheque in Tel Aviv, were divorced twelve years ago. They have a daughter, Sharona, fourteen years old. He had three brothers and two sisters. His mother, aged seventy, lives in Israel.

The Cairo press ridiculed Abie Nathan's flight from Tel Aviv to Port Said as a "comic act which failed to catch any laughs." But the Egyptian Government treated Mr. Nathan with traditional Arab hospitality.

His rickety plane was patched up, and he dined on roast chicken shrimp curry, fish, mayonnaise and pastrama. The Egyptians, who gave Mr. Nathan pajamas because he had brought none with him, also sent him home with a brass miniature of the pyramids for his daughter, who is interested in Egyptian antiquities. But his peace plea got nowhere.

The newspaper Al Ahram, which often reflects the regime's views, derided the flight as a publicity stunt carried out with the "approval and blessings" of the Israeli Government "to attract attention to its timeless plea of

Greatly Honoured Engineer Designed About Half Of High-Rise N. Y. Buildings Since 1945

James Ruderman, a structural engineer who designed many of the major office buildings in New York City, died of a heart attack while going to work on the Long Island Rail Road. He was 67 years old and lived at 28 Norgate Road, Manhasset, Long Island, N. Y. Mr. Ruderman, a civil engineer, was responsible for the structural design of more than forty million square feet of office space in New York, says the New York Times, about half of all the high-rise office construction in the city since the end of World War II.

Among the buildings he was responsible for were: the Pan American Building at Grand Central Terminal; the American Tobacco Building at Park Avenue and 46th Street; the Chemical New York Trust Building, Park Avenue and 48th Street; the New York Hilton Hotel, Sixth Avenue and 53d Street; and the Sperry Rand Building at Rockefeller Center.

Among the more than seventy buildings he helped build is the General Motors Building, which is now being constructed at Fifth Avenue and 58th Street. He also designed the structural work on many theaters and office buildings in other cities in the country and throughout the world.

Mr. Ruderman always championed the steel-framed building against competitive modes of construction. He warned prospective clients to consider that over the 50-year life of a building its owners would be constantly called upon to change its interior to accommodate successive tenants — a practice only feasible with steel framing.

Associates described Mr. Ruderman as a charming man with a keen sense of humor. He was recognized as a top theoretician in his field as well as a practical man.

Many of his designs were for buildings constructed on the air rights of the New York Central Railroad in mid-Manhattan. He had to accomplish intricate construction feats without disrupting rail service, says the New York Times. Because of his work on more than a dozen buildings on Park Avenue between Grand Central Station and 57th Street, friends describe Park Avenue in jest as Ruderman Boulevard.

Born in Minsk, Russia, Mr. Ruderman came to the U.S. at the age of five years. He attended Townsend Harris Hall in New York and was graduated from the City College in 1919. He received a degree in civil engineering from the Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn in 1922; and a Master's degree in civil engineering from Columbia University in 1939.

Mr. Ruderman formed the partnership of Ruderman & Severud in 1927, but this was dissolved in 1932 because of the depression. After that he was in business alone, except for five years during World War II when he was a commander in the Civil Engineering

Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Wittenberg spent their wedding trip in Las Vegas, Nevada. They have taken up residence in Los Angeles.

ZELNICKER-SKWARNY

The marriage of Miss Ida Skwarny, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Skwarny, 750A De L'Epee Avenue, to Jerry Zelnicker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sol Zelnicker, 4090 Maplewood Avenue, was solemnized at Shomrim Laboker Synagogue, on Sunday, November 21, at six o'clock, by Dr. Chaim N. Denburg, Rabbi, assisted by Cantor Arieh L. Subar. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a white, peau de soie gown, trimmed with lace, and scattered with seed-pearl-beads. It had a round neckline; three-quarter-length sleeves; and A-line skirt which finished as a long, detachable train. Her tulle illusion veil was fastened by a flowered headpiece; and she carried a prayer book with white orchids. Mrs. Marvin Heft was maid of honour in a sleeveless, blue crepe gown; with a blue head-band; and carried white, and tinted blue carnations, and roses. Miss Marilyn Shein, and Miss Helen Kensley, were bridesmaids, each wearing a blue, peau de soie gown; made with a beaded bodice; and slim skirt. They had flowered headdresses; and carried bouquets of white, and blue-toned roses and carnations. Rhonda Miller, and Elaine Bell, each aged five years; cousins of the groom; were flower girls, each wearing a blue, peau de soie dress; and halos of blue, and white carnations in their hair; and carried baskets of those flowers. Sidney Zelnicker, brother of the groom, was best man. The ushers were: Max Skwarny, brother of the bride; Leonard Dobrofsky, and Frank Dobrofsky, cousins of the bride; Harry Kamenetsky, Allan Steinberg, Henry Stern, Marvin Segal, and Peter Sweeney. White, and blue carnations, pom-poms, and chrysanthemums formed the background of the wedding. An orchestra played. Three hundred guests were present. Mrs. Skwarny, mother of the bride, wore a blue, peau de soie, sleeveless, gown, worked with beads; and fashioned with a round neckline; and slim skirt, with a long train. She had a blue headpiece; and a corsage of white, and blue carnations. Mrs. Zelnicker, mother of the groom, wore an aquamarine-blue, peau de soie gown, trimmed with beads; and made with a round neckline; and slim skirt extending into a short train. She had a petal hat; and a corsage of white, and blue roses. Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Zelnicker spent their wedding trip in Jamaica; and Miami Beach, Florida, the bride travelling in a blue, crepe ensemble; with a corsage of white orchids. They travelled via Eastern Air Lines. They have taken up residence at 5370 Dudemaine Street. Here for the marriage were: Frank Soodek, uncle of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. H. Yanofsky, Mrs. B. Soodek; all cousins of the groom; all of New York; Mrs. Irving Litvak, and Mrs. R. Bergstein; all of Toronto, Ont.

Social Notes—Montreal

Mrs. Harry Feitleberg, 5475 Rosedale Avenue; and her daughters, Mrs. Jerry Schwartz, 4222 Prince Charles Avenue; and Mrs. Irving Moscovitch, 1468 Louis Crescent; gave a luncheon, at Desjardins Restaurant, to honour Mrs. Feitleberg's niece, Miss Eileen Lendman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Lendman, 4172 Isabella Avenue, and the fiancée of Richard Brian Kramer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Kramer, 1460 Franklyn Drive. Forty-five guests were present. Mrs. Feitleberg wore a royal-blue, silk, knitted suit; with a corsage of pink carnations. Mrs. Schwartz was in a beige, lace suit; with a corsage of pink, and white carnations. Mrs. Moscovitch, wearing a blue, knitted dress, had a corsage of white carnations. Mrs. Lendman wore an off-white, silk dress; with a corsage of pink carnations, and roses. Mrs. Kramer wearing an off-white wool suit; had a corsage of white carnations. Miss Lendman, the bride-to-be, was in a grey, wool suit; with a corsage of mauve orchids. A centrepiece of white, and pink pom-poms, roses, and carnations adorned the table. The marriage will take place on May 29, at the Windsor Hotel.

Mrs. Samuel Zatz, 4700 Bourret Street, entertained sixty-five guests, at a luncheon for her daughter, Miss Sandra Zatz, the fiancee of Marvin Lifshitz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Lifshitz, 5505 Trans Island Avenue. Mrs. Zatz wore a pink, silk, knitted suit; with a corsage of pink carnations. Mrs. Lifshitz was in a pink, knitted suit; with a corsage of pink roses. Miss Zatz, the bride-elect, wearing a green, velvet ensemble, had a corsage of white roses. A centrepiece of pink, and white pom-poms, carnations, gladioli, and roses formed the table decoration. The marriage will take place on March 20, at Shaare Zedek Synagogue.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Peterson, and their daughter, Miss Sandra Barbara Peterson, 5620 Eldridge Street, were present at the sixtieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Getzel Stern, of Toronto, Ont., whose grandson, Joseph Stern, son of Max Stern, of Toronto, and the late Mrs. Beatrice Stern, is the fiance of Miss Peterson. They visited Mrs. Peterson's brother, and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Levinoff, and Sheryn, Howard, and Annie, of Toronto. Mrs. William Burke, 4919 Van Horne Avenue, daughter-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Stern, was also present.

Mr. and Mrs. Berl Dalfen, 5619 Blossom Avenue, celebrated the bar-mitzvah of their son, Allan, who was called to the Reading of the Law at Chevra Kadisha Bnai Jacob Synagogue. He is the brother of Mrs. George Agoston (Phyllis), 4511 Third Street, Chomedey; and Miss Myrna Dalfen; grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Issie Hittner, 5502 Silverson Street; and of the late Mr. and Mrs. Elias Dalfen, of Rumania. Kiddush was observed. Mrs. Dalfen wore a pink, silk knitted suit; with a white, and pink silk hat. Mrs. Agoston wore a blue, knitted suit; and a blue hat. Miss Myrna Dalfen was in a white, wool suit; with a matching hat. The next evening Mr. and Mrs. Dalfen received two hundred guests at a dinner dance in the Synagogue hall. The hostess was in a blue, beaded, peau de soie gown; with a corsage of white orchids. Mrs. Agoston was in a white, peau de soie gown, trimmed with gold-coloured material. Miss Dalfen wore a white, and gold-coloured peau de soie gown; made with a slim skirt. Each had a corsage of white, and gold-toned carnations. Mrs. Hittner, wearing a blue, crepe gown, trimmed with lace, had a corsage of blue-tinted, and white carnations. The family lit the candles on the birthday cake. The above sat at the head-table. The bar-mitzvah boy made a speech. Centrepieces of red and white carnations, pom-poms, and roses, combined with a blue and white birthday cake beautified the table. Joshua Dalfen, cousin, of Israel, was here for the celebration, having flown via El Al Israel Air Lines.

NOTICE ABOUT PICTURES

The Canadian Jewish Review is now considering photographs for the Festival Magazine Issue for Passover, on April 1.

Preference is given to photographs posed before a plain, unfigured background; and all photographs must be straight, front-view; and finished studio pictures. Glossy proofs are required.

Do not accept dark pictures for reproduction in the sepia section of the Review from your photographer as they are not acceptable. Pictures, especially of children, must be light rather than dark and shadowed. Insist on this must.

Candid photographs can never be taken with the same care as photographs in a studio, with studio lighting. Ask your photographer to arrange for studio photographs, too, particularly for weddings and bar-mitzvahs!

MARRIAGES

SCHWARTZ-BUDMAN

The marriage of Miss Shirley Budman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Budman, 4987 Mackenzie Street, to David Schwartz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Schwartz, of Bronx, N. Y., was solemnized at Beth Ora Synagogue, on Saturday, November 6, at half-past seven o'clock, by Rabbi Morris Halpern, assisted by Cantor Samuel Taub, and Reverend A. Kenner. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. Her white, peau de soie gown had a fitted, beaded bodice; round neckline; short sleeves; and A-line skirt with a long train. Her tulle illusion veil was arranged with a seed-pearl-beaded crown; and she carried a prayer book with white orchids. Miss Phyllis Budman, sister of the bride, was maid of honour. She wore a sleeveless, emerald-green, peau de soie gown designed with a beaded bodice; round neckline; and A-line skirt which had a back panel; also a green, beaded head-band; and carried a bouquet of green-tinted carnations, and yellow roses. Mrs. Reuben Budman, sister-in-law of the bride; and Mrs. Allen Hellman, sister of the groom; were bridesmaids; each wearing an emerald-green peau de soie gown, made with an A-line skirt. They had matching hair-bows; and carried cascade bouquets of green-tinted carnations, and yellow roses. Suzanne Lawrence, aged four years, cousin of the bride, was flower girl. She wore an American-Beauty-red, peau de soie dress; and a head-band of yellow roses; and carried a basket of yellow carnations, and red roses. Joel Schwartz was his brother's best man. The ushers were: Reuben Budman, and Abe Budman, brothers of the bride; Allan Hellman, brother-in-law of the groom; Herbert Berger, Bernard Borenstein, Arnold Borenstein, and Jack Lawrence; cousins of the bride; and Dean Russell. Wayne Tucker, aged four years, cousin of the bride, was ring-bearer. Yellow roses, and green-tinted carnations, and palm leaves formed the wedding decorations. Two hundred and thirty guests were received. Mrs. Budman, mother of the bride, wore a yellow, peau de soie gown, fashioned with a beaded bodice; jewel neckline; and slim skirt; and a matching, beaded, pill-box hat. Mrs. Schwartz, mother of the groom, wore a gold-coloured, peau de soie gown which had a beaded jacket; and a matching head-band. Their flowers were wristlets of white orchids. Mr. and Mrs. David Schwartz, spent their wedding trip in Miami Beach, Florida, the bride going away in a red, knitted suit; with a corsage of white orchids. They have taken up residence in Yonkers, N. Y. Here for the marriage were: parents of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. Allen Hellman, of Brooklyn, N. Y., brother-in-law, and sister of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. Joel Schwartz, brother, and sister-in-law of the groom, of Bronx; Mr. and Mrs. Ben Borenstein, great-uncle, and great-aunt of the bride; uncles, and aunts of the bride: Mr. and Mrs. Moe Berger, and son, Herbert Berger; Mr. and Mrs. Max Tucker, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Opat; Mrs. Esther Tobias, William Lagana; all of Bronx; Mr. and Mrs. Jack Lawrence, of Yonkers, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Tucker, and son, Wayne, of Philadelphia, Pa.; cousins of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Dean Russell, Senior; and Mr. and Mrs. Dean Russell, Junior; all of Hartford, Conn.

ZIM ISRAEL

Their combined capacity will double the 50,000 tons carried annually by the Zion and the Israel.

The labor problem has reached a point where a third of the Zim crews are foreign. This setup cost $7-million in valuable earnings last year alone, says the New York Times. A new nautical school was opened at Ashdod and will bring to 1,000 the number of annual graduates, tripling the current supply.

The line's former general manager, Dr. Naftali Wydra, wanted to split the company into cargo and passenger divisions but was overruled. It was one reason he resigned after having headed Zim since 1947.

Zim is owned equally by the Government, the Jewish Agency, and the Histadrut Labor Federation, but there have been efforts to get the nongovernmental interests — especially Histadrut — to withdraw. Critics such as Dr. Wydra maintain that the Federation has more authority than its investment warrants.

The company has sixty-six related concerns, including many other steamship lines sailing between widely scattered ports. It has also worked with developing countries in building other fleets, says the New York Times. Ghana's Black Star Line is an example.

Burial was at Shaar Hashomayim Synagogue. Shiva was at the home. Mr. Fogle was born in Birmingham, England. He spent his early youth in Scotland, and his speech never lost its Scotch burr. His family moved to Ottawa when he was young, and he was active in the founding of the Big Brother movement while living there. As a young man he moved to Kingston, Ont., where he had a flourishing insurance business. However his love of nature and flowers prompted him to make this interest his life's work. In 1961 another of his great interests, the city of Montreal, prompted him to move his business to an old building on St. Paul Street, where he continued it until his death. Mr. Fogle was active in the Boy Scouts movement and kept up his great interest in youth. One of his proudest moments came when he was chosen to make a bouquet for the Queen during her last visit to the Montreal Children's Hospital. Mr. Fogle was a member of the Masonic Order, St. George's Lodge Number 10; a past patron of the Order of the Eastern Star; and a past Regent of the Royal Arcanum. He was a member of Shaar Hashomayim Synagogue.

$14 BILLION WOMEN'S GARMENT INDUSTRY EYES CLOSER SERVICE TO RETAILERS BY SWEEPING CHANGES

The $14-billion women's garment industry is making sweeping changes in techniques as it seeks to lure customers with new colors, styling detail, and fabrics. Beginning the second half of its most profitable decade, the industry is undertaking even greater changes, says the New York Times, in marketing, administrative, production, and distribution procedures than those made five and ten years ago.

And Seventh Avenue, the physical symbol of the industry in the heart of Manhattan, has exemplified many changes that have occurred and will reflect newer ones as it reacts to the challenges of the future.

The core of almost all the new developments has been the adoption of corporate management techniques to deal with the burgeoning consumer demand of the fifties and sixties.

Although the fashion industry was, for many years, fragmented into thousands of smaller companies, the growth of multi-store retail companies, fostered by the population's flow to the suburbs, spurred the rise of giant apparel makers.

Automated manufacturing techniques and the use of electronic data-processing at the retailer and manufacturer levels assured a flow of goods geared closely to the needs and preferences of shoppers.

Today companies with sales of $100-million or more supply in depth the varied needs of not only the country's largest general merchandise retailers, but also the large and small specialty stores in every city and town.

To meet these demands, a diversity of apparel, ranging from lingerie to outerwear, or from hosiery to sportswear is being offered by the industry's largest producers.

However, as frequently happens when a dynamic sales trend is enjoyed by an industry, the logistical and selling apparatus needed to effect the smoothest business exchange lagged behind the sales curve, says the New York Times. Apparel makers, in the last few years, have attempted to gear their operations to provide the most efficient movement of goods to the retailer.

A better net profit, which has not accompanied the boom in sales, is expected to emerge from the more efficient techniques, since the reduction of costs is a major criterion in developing new systems.

From a sales standpoint, while Seventh Avenue remains the focal selling point of the apparel industry, many companies are opening regional sales offices in major cities to service retailers in those areas. The objective is to concentrate on building regional business by more effective and closer relationships with local retailers.

Distribution facilities are a major element under process of change. Multidivision producers, such as Bobbie Brooks, Inc.; Russ Togs, Inc.; Berkshire Frocks, built new or enlarged distribution warehouse facilities last year. The new structures include the latest in materials handling devices, conveyor systems, and steam-absorption air-conditioning to create favorable working environments and atmospheric conditions for storing merchandise.

Underlying these moves is an attempt to meet the still-proliferating expansion of retailers with distribution, cutting and fabric inventory systems that will provide maximum service, large in-stock inventories, and faster deliveries.

In New York City and State, the development of such new facilities is being eased through long-term, low-interest loans by the City Industrial Development Corporation and the State Job Development Authority.

Russ Togs, for example, received an $810,000 mortgage loan to construct a 260,000-square-foot building in Long Island City. Joseph Love, Inc., a leading children's wear producer, obtained a $150,000 loan for a 60,000-square-foot plant in College Point, Queens, says the New York Times. Both plants are geared to handle a substantially larger volume than the companies now have.

Despite ambitious expansion efforts and the decentralization of administrative and distribution facilities, Seventh Avenue remains the center for exhibiting lines to the nation's stores and for designing rooms. In fact, as they act to increase efficiency, garment makers are expanding and sprucing up their quarters. Russ Togs, after putting the final touches on its new distribution center, is planning to enlarge its offices at 1372 Broadway. It will move from the seventh to the second floor, where an escalator will carry visitors directly from the lobby.

The demand for space in the apparel center's main buildings continues to be strong. Plans call for new buildings fronting Broadway or Seventh Avenue, and remodeling existing buildings on those streets.

It is safe to say that within the next five years, the space available in the garment center, of which Seventh Avenue is the nucleus, will be more and more devoted to executive and sales offices.

Accounting, administrative, and inventory control facilities, with those of production, will be moved farther out, either to other boroughs or states. Designing facilities, however, will continue to be centered in the Seventh Avenue area, near the focal traffic lanes, the major stores, and cultural sites, says the New York Times. From a corporate standpoint, the larger producers may also be expected to do the following:

Further diversify products, so they may become more important as full-line suppliers to the biggest retailers. Add men's and women's wear where they had been engaged exclusively in one or the other.

Concentrate sportswear production on specialized types of leisure wear, while coat and suit concerns will venture into dresses, rainwear, and sportswear. Cater to as many age brackets as are significant in the growing population — infants and children, junior petites, juniors, misses, and half-sizes for heavier women.

Evaluate the "senior citizen" market as a new target, realizing that women above fifty-five are earning more money or have derived higher income than ever before.

J.D.C. — Malben Is Guardian Angel, Helps Aged To Build New Life In Israel

"Ever since our arrival in the country," Dr. Max Vishevsky said, "Malben has been hovering over us like a guardian angel." Dr. Vishevsky, now 72 years old, a native of Vienna, and his wife, Sima, were survivors of the Nazi concentration camps. Dr. (of law) Vishevsky and his wife are two more elderly newcomers whose remaining years in Israel are being made not only secure but happy and rewarding by Malben, the Joint Distribution Committee welfare program for aged and infirm immigrants in Israel.

When they first arrived Malben installed them in one of its homes for the aged. "It was good," Dr. Vishevsky said, "we were kept busy in the library. But after a while my wife and I wanted a little place of our own again." This became possible when JDC-Malben inaugurated its extra-mural program helping elderly immigrants to take up private residence in the communities. Malben, which is financed by JDC with United Jewish Appeal funds, joined with local and national authorities to help to establish aged couples in small rent-and-tax-free apartments. The Vishevskys were among the first to qualify for an apartment in Kiriat Motzkin, a residential town north of Haifa.

But Dr. Vishevsky wanted to be completely independent. Again he turned to Malben for help, this time for just enough capital to open a small lending library. He could operate it in his own little flat. JDC-Malben social workers liked the idea. It was approved. "They (JDC-Malben) enclosed our small terrace and lined the walls with shelves. They filled the shelves with some 700 books and we were able to start our lending library," Dr. Vishevsky said.

Every morning at the stroke of nine they open their small shop and until noon they serve an ever-increasing clientele ranging from youngsters to the elderly. Half the stock is always out on loan and some of the books, particularly novels, have long reserve lists. Later in the afternoon they rest a while and then at five o'clock they go out. At first they would walk to a small cafe and there, over cups of coffee, they would discuss their modestly successful little business. But more recently, with the opening of a new cultural center for the community's older people, Dr. Vishevsky and his wife, Sima, go directly there.

In the center Dr. Vishevsky goes in one direction, his wife in another. He greets his new friends, exchanges news, discusses Israeli politics, and then sits down to a game of chess or gin rummy. Sima heads for the workship where she joins in a merry female symphony of clacking knitting needles and pleasant conversation.

Dr. Vishevsky and his wife are happy at the club. "Mrs. Vishevsky and I have been married 48 years. We are from the old world. Here we meet people like ourselves. The Israel sun is wonderful for our old bones but the warmth of human friendship, ach, that is sunshine for our souls."

WHAT TROUBLE IN THE MIDDLE EAST?

making peace with the Arabs," says the New York Times. It urged the Israeli Government to carry out the United Nations resolutions for repatriation and compensation of Palestine refugees.

The 38-year-old venturer failed to accomplish the aim of his journey as he was refused an interview with President Nasser. However, he left a copy of his peace petition with Egyptians in Port Said, says the London Times. All he brought back from Egypt was a miniature of the pyramids, which he had obtained from the Governor of Port Said in exchange for a torn copy of the Old Testament that he had carried on his flight for luck.

According to his brother, a wireless operator in Jerusalem, the adventurer believed in his luck because of a birthmark on his back.

The brother said Abe had fallen into a boiling pot at the age of two and survived without serious burns; at five he fell from a two-storey building without injury; as a war pilot in India and Israel he crashed several times without being injured.

Several hundred well-wishers spent a good part of the day at the airstrip in Herzlia, near Tel Aviv, hoping to see Mr. Nathan land. Similar crowds, believing he might land at Lydda, Sdeh, or Dov, waited for him at those airports.

No sooner had the wheels of his Stearman touched down than two admirers leapt on to the wings, hugged the pilot ecstatically, and drank from a bottle of brandy.

A police tender followed the aircraft as it taxied towards a hangar. The police had a hard time tearing the hero away from his admirers long enough to charge him with having gone to Egypt illegally.

Mr. Nathan was driven from the airport to a hotel where the management had offered him the presidential suite. Police were called to hold back crowds trying to force their way into the building. Mr. Nathan told reporters he had been well and courteously treated in Port Said. He spent the night in prison and was taken on a tour of the city, says the London Times. Asked by a reporter whether he would do it again, he said he would.

JANINA

By Hanan Ayalti, in the Jewish Frontier; translated from the Yiddish by Catherine Kranjec

"On your way, will you also stop in Warsaw?" "Yes. Several days only."

"Maybe you would take two pair of nylon stockings to someone there?"

Nylon stockings? In my baggage? To Warsaw? I was supposed to go to Warsaw only after Tel Aviv and Moscow, crossing several borders and passing through several customs inspections. And how did I get ladies' stockings?

"They are for a Polish woman in Warsaw. She saved my daughter in 'those' years. You know . . ." he murmured.

We knew each other only at the printing shop. A good craftsman, he was always busy with his work, earnest, quiet. I had a notion that during the war years he was there, in the Ghetto, in the camps. But who thinks of those things nowadays? One doesn't talk about it. One does talk about the catastrophe; millions — but the man who stands near you at work whom you see each day.

"Your daughter? Alice?"

I had met her. She visited him occasionally at the shop. A young woman. She had been married in America. She had a child.

"She was just a child," he said, "she was not even three years old, when Janina took her in. That's her name, the Polish woman, Janina. You know what the Nazis did to the Jewish children. We worked in a shop in the no-man's land between the Ghetto and the Polish city. Any day they could come and take us. And what would happen to the child? Then Janina came and took her. We didn't know her and we didn't have any money."

"And you didn't see Alice during all that time?"

"Once. Later we worked in Radom. Janina came with the child and walked around the factory. We saw Alice from far away, through the fence. It was only after the war that we saw her again."

"Did Janina give back the child immediately?"

"Yes, but it wasn't so simple. In the meantime she took Alice to a relative of hers in a village. In Warsaw it was dangerous. The relatives adopted the child. But after the war Janina went there and brought her back."

"In that case . . . I'll manage the customs. Send me the stockings, special delivery. My plane leaves tomorrow night."

He scribbled the address on a piece of paper: Janina Jamiolkowska, Warsaw-Praga, Obwodowa 16, Poland.

Ten weeks later I met Janina in Warsaw.

She did not telephone the hotel as I had arranged with Adam, the father of the child. Did his letter get lost? Censorship? The two pair of stockings were my most important mission in Warsaw, perhaps in the whole of my trip. How do you look for a street somewhere in Praga? I got into a taxi. Even the Polish driver didn't know where Obwodowa street was. He asked a policeman. The policeman studied his book of streets and gave us general directions. The driver was certain I was going to do big business. Why should a Jew from America go all the way to Praga? The fare alone would amount to a fortune!

He stopped several times to ask the way. The neighborhoods grew poorer. We turned into a side street without pavement. Along each side stood wooden shacks, some painted; on empty lots wild grass. A little farther on the world ended — a stone wall and behind the wall, trees.

"Ah, but this is the Jewish cemetery of Brudnol" said the driver. "If I had known this . . ."

It was after a rain and children in worn clothes were playing in the puddles and mud. They surrounded the taxi. Curious eyes looked out from mud-smeared faces.

"Where does Janina Jamiolkowska live?"

"Here!" they exclaimed in chorus, and pointed toward a house from which the paint had faded. There were several apartments. They all went with us to the door. A young blonde girl appeared at the theshold.

"You came from America?"

"Yes."

"How is Aunt Julia? Only today a letter came. Mother just left to look for you. Come in!"

The apartment consisted of one room and a kitchen. In the middle of the room was a big table with high-backed chairs around it. On the table, books and notebooks.

"Are you preparing lessons for school?"

"Yes."

"What is your name?"

"Ursula. How are Uncle Adam and Aunt Julia? And how is Alusza?"

"They are fine. They send greetings. Do you remember them?"

"Oh, no," she smiled, "when they were here I was only several months old."

My glance fell on a corner of the room. It looked as though the floor had been cut and replaced with a square piece. Ursula followed my glance.

"There they were hiding. Underneath is a deep hole, a kind of cellar."

"Who? Adam and Julia?"

"I don't know . . . Jews. Other Jews I think. Then there was always a rug lying over the top and a bench was on the rug."

She got up and instinctively pushed a chair into that corner. She did not know any of them, but she grew up with the legend of that time. The hole in the earth and the cut floor over it were witnesses that it was not a legend.

Early the next morning Janina knocked at my door. Dark hair, thin, she wore a cheap grey raincoat — certainly her best. She looked forty-some years. It means that then she was still very young, in her twenties. She started to ask about the family in New York.

"I heard that Alusza got married," she said. She took out a picture from her handbag. Two small children, her boy Janusz and Alusza. A Polish child and a Jewish child photographed together in those years, not far from the Ghetto wall, from the Gestapo, from . . .

"They used to play together. Janusz once took her to the movies and she fell asleep. He would like to see her again."

"Alusza was not always with you, was she?"

"No. She was blonde and spoke Polish well. We told everyone that she was Polish, an orphan, from distant relatives. It was wartime, you know. But once a neighbor woman asked her father's name. 'My father's name was Abraham,' she answered. Immediately all the neighbors knew a Jewish child was being hidden in our house. You know, the Germans were paying for reporting a hidden Jew. One couldn't wait even a day. It was winter, bitter cold. In the middle of the night I wrapped the sleeping child in a blanket and started on my way. Somewhere far away, in a village near Katowice I had a relative. She married a German. I took the child there, told a long story: an orphan . . . the father fell in the war . . . They were childless so they adopted her."

"And after the war?"

"I went there. The German tore his hair: he had saved a Jewish child! What made the thing worse, he had grown to love the child; his wife was crazy about her. And here we are: it's a Jewish child. He was angry because I had deceived him; on the other hand, he asked me for a certificate to show he had hidden a Jewish child. Now it was a distinction of merit, especially for a German."

While she talked she was rubbing her hands as though she were warming them. Her fingers looked stiff.

CLASS IN COOKERY

SOUR CREAM COOKIES

one cup sour cream
one cup flour
one teaspoon baking powder
six walnuts
one-half pound margarine or butter
one cup sugar
one-quarter teaspoon salt

Sift together flour, salt, and baking powder. Cream shortening or butter with sugar; add dry ingredients and sour cream, and combine well. Form into cookies with cutter. Mix finely chopped walnuts with two teaspoons of sugar, and sprinkle on top of each cookie. Place them on greased cookie sheet, and bake at three hundred degrees for about one-half hour.

Mrs. S. Altrows,
4150 Melrose Avenue, Montreal.

NOODLE PUDDING

six eggs, well beaten
one teaspoon vanilla
three-quarters cup oil
one tablespoon lemon juice
one and one-half packages medium noodles
one twenty-ounce tin crushed pineapple

Cook noodles in salt water, and drain. Mix all ingredients thoroughly, pour into a greased baking dish, and bake for forty-five minutes, or until browned, at three hundred and fifty degrees.

Mrs. Jack Teppermam,
2900 Bathurst Street, Toronto.

"What is the matter with your hands?"

"Arthritis."

"You have only two children?"

"Yes. Ursula, you have seen her. And Janusz, he is a big boy now. He wanted to study but he was obliged to go to work early."

"What is your husband's work?"

"He was a railroad worker, but lately he has been sick — something wrong with his heart. He spent some time in the hospital. He gets a small pension from the Government as a retired worker."

"And how is life?"

"One gets along. There is enough bread and there is milk for breakfast for the children. There is soup for dinner. Sometimes there is even a piece of meat."

She didn't complain about the economic situation nor about the regime. She had faith that there would come better times — for everyone.

"Tell me, Janina, besides Alusza, did you hide other Jews?"

"Yes, several . . ."

I took my notebook. She began remembering slowly:

"There was a Mr. Goldberg and with him was a Mrs. Rubinstein. He left a manuscript, a diary. I gave it to a historic institute. They left for Argentina, I think."

"And who was hiding in the cellar under the floor?"

"Ah, that was another family: the father, a son, and the mother. They were hiding there about a year and a half."

"Do you hear anything from them?"

"No, nothing. After the war, they went, I think, to Israel."

"It is a hard life in Israel," I said. "There are difficulties in finding living quarters, and work . . ."

"But they might have written a few words." She spoke in a quiet voice without blame. "I do not ask anything . . . But a few words . . . If it had not been for Adam and Julia I would have lost faith in men. Julia writes to us; they send a package from time to time, and medicine for my husband. But it is not what they send, the important thing is the friendship . . . they didn't forget us."

"How could you hide three people in such a small apartment? Such a long time?"

"You mean the other family? Well, it was not easy. At night they would sometimes come up into the house; sometimes also during the day. If steps were heard nearby they would hurry back into the cellar. We had also to be careful about the neighbors. In the darkness I would secretly carry away the chamber pots so that no one would notice. They could not go outside, not even at night. So it went on day after day, month after month."

"Why did you do it, Janina?"

"Because . . . my husband was in the Party, and we were told to help as much as we could. But this was not the main reason. I think there is no difference between people, Jews and non-Jews. And I believe one should be good and human, and that one has to help another in need. And so I have brought up the children, Janusz and Ursula. I was born in a village in a poor family. There were seven of us; we lived in need. Sometimes there was not even a piece of dry bread in the house. I was twelve when I went to work. Later I worked as a maid in Warsaw for a Jewish family in the neighborhood that was to become the Ghetto."

Her explanation explained very little. Want in childhood and work as a servant could also bring out envy, bitterness, and malice. She was apparently intelligent. Although she went to work very young she spoke Polish well, expressed her thoughts adequately, and, it seemed to me, had read the newspapers. She looked at me for a while.

"Why are you moved?"

I turned my head away and was silent. I knew why: because I would not have had the strength to do it. Risking one's life day after day, for hundreds of days, every hour of the day for strangers. And more than this, the moral courage to stand against the pressure of the surrounding atmosphere, against the long tradition of generations of contempt and hatred. Where did this simple woman get the strength to hold to faith in human goodness when all around there was a raging sea of hatred and malice?

"Do you know Vladka?" she asked.

Who hadn't heard of Vladka? A Jewish girl, she lived in Warsaw as an Aryan on the Gentile side. She was a secret courier, had smuggled weapons into the Ghetto, took care of hidden children. Later, in America, she wrote a book about those years.

"I don't know her personally, but I have heard of her."

"I went with her several times to the concentration camps. Give her my regards. She may remember me."

She got up. The pain of the arthritis was apparent in her walk.

"Have you had any help from the Jewish Committee?" I asked her.

"No, nothing."

"Why?"

"Right after the war I turned to them. But at that time there was a big rush of all kinds of people. Many Poles came who had not helped Jews. They started to ask questions, to investigate me. I couldn't stand it and I didn't go anymore."

The Polski honor, Polish pride! But I understood her.

"I am going now to a Jewish association. Will you come with me?"

We went together to the Jewish Cultural Association at Nowogrodzka Street, number 5. The Association occupied a whole house. She waited in the small restaurant on the second floor. I met with some political leaders and writers. I used the occasion to ask if they could get some help for Janina. They had no funds, they explained. And the branch of the American Joint Distribution Committee in Poland helps only Jews. But if I could get a certificate for her from the Jewish Historical Institute in Poland, the "Joint" might consider some compensation.

I had no time left to go to the Institute. I would have to get certain papers in New York, anyway. My meeting with the writers lasted several hours. I apologized to Janina.

"It doesn't matter," she said. "I have been talking to the people here. They all thought I was one of them."

We said good-bye. She went back to her apartment at Obwodowa, which is full of memories and shadows of those years. I went to the monument of the martyrs and fighters of the Warsaw Ghetto.

Back in New York. When one returns from a long trip there are a thousand things waiting to be done. I made a vow not to forget Janina. Soon I got in touch with Julia and Vladka. Everything was done in the New York way. To this day I have not seen either of them; we only talked by telephone.

"We should try to find the Mr. Goldberg in Argentina," I said to Julia, "maybe he could help a little. The other family is in Israel and they probably do not have much for themselves."

"Israel, my eye! They are in New York."

"In New York?"

"Yes, in Washington Heights. They even changed their name. They own a small factory and are quite well off. The son got married. Mazl Tov."

"And they do not help Janina? They don't even write?"

"Well, as you can see . . . Janina was pregnant with Ursula at the time they were hiding in her house. She would go even then to dig potatoes in the field in order to bring them something to eat. After the harvest she would look for carrots or beets in the deserted fields . . . I came to Janina straight from the camp. I looked like a skeleton, dirty and sick. She took me into her small apartment, gave me a bed, water to wash myself, and a piece of bread to eat."

The next day Julia sent me the necessary document for the Historical Institute in Warsaw: that Janina had in those years saved their child.

Vladka, too, remembered Janina well. She also knew the other family — from Warsaw and in New York. And she knew that Janina hid them for eighteen months.

"But how is it possible that they absolutely refuse to help a woman who risked her own life in order to save theirs? It's unimaginable!"

"There are different people in the world," she said.

One of my friends has suggested a Freudian explanation: that they could not face their past, that they wanted to erase it. Well, it might be true, but why always push the responsibility onto Mr. Freud?

Several days later Vladka sent me the necessary documents in which she described Janina's activities during those years. She also had Janina's address in the documents. Did she remember it after so many years? Or perhaps she had it written down?

I sent the documents to the Jewish Historical Institute in Warsaw. Several months passed. Janina wrote me that from the Institute they sent her to a second committee. (To the Joint Distribution Committee, I supposed). There they asked her for documents. It was a good thing that I had prepared several copies. I sent them directly to Janina. Vladka sent, in addition, her greetings and a recommendation to a friend of hers from the Underground who is now working in the "Joint" branch in Warsaw.

Some time ago, I received a letter from Janina. She writes me, among other things, "I went to the Joint at Nowogrodzka 5. I made a petition and added the letters. Everything went well. They granted me 300 zlotys a month. I have already received payments for September and October. I thank all of you."

For the last year or more he had been associated with Murray Shapiro and Leo Plofker in the office of James Ruderman, 84 Fifth Avenue.

A member of virtually all the professional societies in his field, Mr. Ruderman was named engineer of the year in 1964 by the American Society of Civil Engineers. He was also the recipient of the Townsend Harris Medal from City College in the same year.

He was a member of the New York City Building Code Committee, and of a committee that revised the steel code for the American Institute of Steel Construction. In 1964 he presided at an international conference in Luxembourg, says the New York Times, called by the European Coal and Iron Community.

Mr. Ruderman is survived by his widow, the former Miss Irene Kirwan; three daughters: Mrs. Claire Ashkin, Mrs. Jean Aboohaker, and Mrs. Sophie Weber; a sister; and seven grandchildren.

NOTICE ABOUT PICTURES

The Canadian Jewish Review is now considering photographs for the Festival Magazine Issue for Passover, on April 1.

Preference is given to photographs posed before a plain, unfigured background; and all photographs must be straight, front-view; and finished studio pictures. Glossy proofs are required.

Do not accept dark pictures for reproduction in the sepia section of the Review from your photographer as they are not acceptable. Pictures, especially of children, must be light rather than dark and shadowed. Insist on this must.

Candid photographs can never be taken with the same care as photographs in a studio, with studio lighting. Ask your photographer to arrange for studio photographs, too, particularly for weddings and bar-mitzvahs!

What is the A. B. C. or Audit Bureau of Circulations, and what is its importance?

A. The A. B. C. is a voluntary association of major publishers, advertisers, national and local; and advertising agencies, working together to police circulation claims, and to translate them into facts.

Q. Why are circulation facts so important?

A. Circulation figures are the only honest basis on which print advertising is sold and purchased. Publishers base their prices for advertising on the amount of their circulation, and its quality. An advertiser buys circulation. A. B. C. circulation facts tell him the exact amount at any time.

Q. How does an advertiser know that this is really so?

A. A. B. C. publishers keep exact records of all circulation receipts for subscriptions and single copy sales. These can tell him, too, whether the circulation is sold without a premium, or with one, to induce payment; or whether the circulation is composed of membership in an organization; or whether it is sold on its merit alone. Was the subscription sold on a special rate? Was it paid by mail directly to the publisher, or to an agent? These are just some of the categories of subscription payments which are recorded.

Q. Why are some of these answers so important?

A. Sometimes these answers can tell an advertiser whether the subscriber needs to be coaxed into continuing, or starting. Are subscribers voluntarily buying the publication? Do they need a cut-rate or an added attraction to keep on?

Q. How are the figures checked?

A. The publisher checks his figures, and reports them twice a year to the head office of the A. B. C. These are audited once a year by travelling A. B. C. auditors, who check the names, the receipts, the printing invoices, the bank deposits, the paper used, the ink used, the postage receipts — all of these show the number of copies printed or mailed; and paid for. If an A. B. C. field auditor goes to work for a publication whose books he has audited within a year or so, there is an automatic re-audit by another auditor. An auditor does not audit the figures of any publication for more than two consecutive years.

Q. Does the A. B. C. allow past-due subscriptions?

A. The A. B. C. rules state that all subscriptions up for renewal must be paid within three months of the expiry date. The publisher must keep track of each one. These are considered paid, but not completely so, until paid in full, for the term to come.

Q. Are new subscriptions considered as paid?

A. Not until payment is received for the term in advance.

Q. What does this cost the publisher?

A. The publisher considers the membership as his investment to protect the investment of each advertiser. The publisher pays quarterly dues; the cost of the auditing done in his office, by the hour; and the cost of checking done further, at the A. B. C. head office. If further checking is needed, the publisher pays that cost, too. An auditor spends several days in the Canadian Jewish Review office each year.

Q. Are these the only costs?

A. The greatest cost to the publisher is to see that the records are kept in order and up to date. The Canadian Jewish Review addressograph plates are posted to show the date and method and amount of payment; and the date of the subscription, and the length of its term. A publication must carry on the address label all information that the auditor would need to guide him in checking. A publication which sells subscriptions on short-term, or with a premium, or in combination with other publications, for instance, will carry all that information and more, on the address label, coded in some way.

Q. What do A. B. C. reports and statements say about the Canadian Jewish Review?

A. They tell at a quick glance the provincial breakdown; the amount sold in a period; that the Canadian Jewish Review never sells a subscription on a premium; never with a cut rate; never jointly with another publication; never as part of membership in an organization.

The Canadian Jewish Review is sold on its own merits, and always has been. It has no affiliation with any organization.

A. B. C. reports and statements supply facts to advertisers. These facts need to be known for advertising money to be spent wisely and honestly.

A. B. C. publications can never guarantee results. They do guarantee readership.

The Canadian Jewish Review is in its 22nd year of supplying facts to advertisers, investing to protect investments.

The Canadian Jewish Review is still the only publication reaching the general Jewish community in Canada, which can provide audited, paid, A. B. C. circulation facts and figures for the protection of each advertiser.

How does the Shalom stack up?

Differently. You see, most ocean liners have their smokestacks one-behind-the-other. The Shalom's stacks are side-by-side. This creates a lot more space—space below for elegant lounges, restaurants and huge staterooms; space above for game rooms, swimming pools and broad sweeps of deck.

But the Shalom's real difference isn't in her design. It's in her demeanor. The Shalom is friendly. Very friendly. That's because she's an Israeli ship and the Israelis are naturally warm-hearted, stimulating, hospitable. Which means there's absolutely nothing la-de-da about the Shalom. However, that's not to say life aboard the Shalom isn't filled with luxuries. After all, with sauna baths, duty-free shops, nightclubs, first-run films and VIP facilities, to say nothing of five gourmet meals a day, what else could it be?

This year the Shalom is making four transatlantic trips to Israel —April 29, May 27, June 30 and July 29. Each features stops in such marvelous ports as Lisbon, Cannes, Naples and Piraeus. She is also making a special 48-day High Holiday Festival Cruise to the Mediterranean and Israel sailing on August 30 to 12 ports. For reservations, see your travel agent or call Zim.

Passover at Kutsher's is a holiday as well as a Holy Day

At Kutsher's, the Passover starts off with the golden tones of Cantor Sholom Katz and the Samuel Sterner Choir. (Dietary laws, of course.) Then, you can go a few holes on our 18-hole golf course, take a swim in our heated indoor pool, limber up in our indoor health club, play a little badminton or tennis, ice-skate on our artificial rink . . . or you can just snooze the day away in one of the over-stuffed chairs in our beautiful new lobby. At night, you can live it up in our 2 night clubs (enclosed lakeside promenade from lobby and dining room to the clubs), laugh it up watching our great Broadway entertainment, dance it up until dawn . . . and don't worry about the kids. We've got enough to keep them busy day and night. As busy as we keep you, OK?

ALMANAC and Calendar of imminent SPECIAL EVENTS

Being a Compendium of Hindsights and Forecasts designed to let us know where we've been and where you're going!

MARCH 1966

11 Fr 1888—Big Blizzard begins; snow eventually stops; stories never have. 1966—Grossinger's 52nd Annual Winter Carnival begins (to Mar. 13) with cinestar JESSICA WALTER as Queen. New York Football Giant Fullback STEVE THURLOW as King.

12 Sa 1933—First F.D.R. Fireside Chat. 1948—The "Roosevelt" Building at Grossinger's dedicated by Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr.

13 Su 1884—Standard Time established. Happily, The "G" is one of those enchanted places where you always can forget what time it is.

15 Tu 44 B.C.—Julius Caesar assassinated; the Ides of March finish this day.

17 Th ST. PATRICK'S DAY . . . Grossinger's International Kitchen will feature Irish Lamb Stew a la Briscoe, with Green Matzoh Ball.

19 Sa Swallows are supposed to return to Capistrano today. If they miss, come to the "G" and we'll have one of our four orchestras play the song for you.

20 Su VERNAL EQUINOX at 8:53 E.S.T. Spring rears its sprightly head at Grossinger's.

21 M Almanac says "Sun turns back North." What was that we've been getting tanned by at The "G" Solarium . . . a flash bulb?

23 W 1882—Polygamy finally abolished (in U.S., that is.) Good thing; no man really could enjoy a vacation (even at The "G") with 2 wives at one time.

25 Fr Grossinger's popular BUNNY BALL (to Mar. 27). Singles Soiree.

26 Sa Kuhio Day in Hawaii; don't know what they're celebrating, but every one at The "G" will drink a toast to Hawaii, at The Cocktail Party.

27 Su 1513—Ponce De Leon discovered Florida; sought fountain of youth; turned out to be more of a senior citizens home. Want to rejuvenate? Take to the hills instead of the pills. March with Spring in your step.

28 M 721 B.C.—First recorded Lunar eclipse in Babylon. Must have been thousands of Lunar eclipses at The "G", according to number of Romances (with Capital R) started here.

29 Tu 1848—Niagara Falls stopped 30 hours as result of ice jam. Honeymooners don't take such chances these days; they come to Grossinger's where things always flow smoothly.

30 W 1867—U.S. "steals" Alaska for $7,200,000; no wonder Russians are sore at us.

31 Th Today Begins Grossinger's Annual Duplicate Bridge Championships, (to Sun. Apr. 3.) Almost concurrently (beginning tomorrow) Lucille & Tony present the sensational International Week-end DANCE FESTIVAL. The bidding might go: One Heart—Two Milongas—Three Spades—Four Pam Pams (That's the new dance Lucille & Tony are going to teach guests at The Festival.)

Interment was at Toronto Hebrew Benevolent Society Section of Dawes Road Cemetery. Shiva was at the home of a brother-in-law, and sister, Mr. and Mrs. M. Gladman, 70 Fullwell Crescent. Pallbearers were: Martin and Gordon Resnick, Michael and Jerry Gladman, and Ted and Paul Perlove, nephews. Honourary pall-bearers were his life-long friends: Milt Dunnell, sports editor of the Toronto Daily Star; Jim Coleman, columnist of the Telegram; Ted Reeve, columnist of the Telegram; Trent Frayne, of the Jockey Club; Mike Armstrong, Telegram horse racing columnist; Ray Timson, assistant city editor of the Toronto Daily Star; Samuel Starr; Annis Stukus, Television sportscaster; Johnny Starr, horse trainer of Conn Smythe; David Fienberg, builder; Bob Hunter, stockbroker; Norman Price, a retired employee of the Canadian Pacific Railways; Henry Wright, of the Jockey Club; and Jack Shapiro, a life-long friend. Mr. Perlove was a member of Bnai Brith Sportsmen's Lodge.

The following article, headed: "Joe Perlove: Turf Writer Caught Mood Of $2 Plunger", is from the Toronto Globe And Mail:

Joe Perlove, a turf writer for the Toronto Daily Star since 1937, died of cancer. He was 60.

He was known as The Colonel, Perly, or Pal Joey. He devoted his life trying to devise a system to beat the horses and was still involved in this research when he died.

He was always eager to recommend sure winners to his friends. The only consolation they had when these surefire tips finished far up the track was that Perlove also speculated heavily on his selection.

He seldom missed a day at the races. The fact that he was also supposed to cover these activities for his newspaper was incidental. He had a rapport with the average better and his track stories usually reflected the dreams, the hopes, and often the misfortunes of the $2 plunger.

Although racing was his major beat for the Star, he also covered baseball, which suited his refined tastes because it enabled him to take winter vacations in Florida during the training season. He often went to the Kentucky Derby; championship boxing bouts; and the World Series. He also covered National Hockey League games. He took a particular delight in writing about professional wrestling in a mock-serious style.

In 1960 he was honored by Toronto Sportsmen's Lodge, Bnai Brith, as the man of the year.

The Perloves came originally from Russia. His father, Louis, came to Canada in 1902. Joe attended Jarvis Collegiate Institute where, he said, "I majored in squash and snooker." He started writing sports on space rates.

Hershel Frank, 533 Brookdale Avenue, died on January 31, at the Doctors' Hospital, at the age of fifty-one years. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Irene Frank; and two sons, Hershel Frank, and Allan Frank; three brothers, Albert Frank; David Frank, and Arthur Frank, all of Toronto; two sisters, Mrs. B. Rubenstein (Betty), 464 College Street; and Mrs. M. Giller (Anna), 7 Millicent Avenue. Rabbi David Monson, officiated at the funeral service. Interment was at the Lubavitcher Synagogue Section, of Mount Sinai Memorial Park. Shiva was at the home. Mr. Frank was a member of the Lubavitcher Synagogue.

Reverend Lieber Burak died on February 13 at the Baycrest Hospital at the age of eighty-eight years. He is survived by three sons: Mandel Burak, of Windsor, Ontario; Saul Burak, of Detroit, Michigan; and Rabbi Moses Burak, 321 Palmerston Boulevard. Rabbi Moses Burak and Rabbi G. Felder officiated at the funeral service. Interment was at Husatiner Klaus Synagogue Section of Bathurst Lawn Cemetery. Reverend Burak was a resident of the Jewish Home For The Aged and a life member of Husatiner Klaus Synagogue. He came to Canada in 1927 and served as Schochet and religious leader of the Jewish community of Guelph, Ontario.

REFORM JEWS TO CALL CONFERENCE ON WHAT TO TEACH CHILDREN

Rabbi Alexander M. Schindler, national director of Education of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, called for a radical revision of the approach to Jewish education to conform with the pervasive changes in the American Jewish community. He felt that the present program of religious education, promulgated decades ago, has become largely irrelevant.

Before the 11th annual convention of the National Association of Temple Educators in Philadelphia, Rabbi Schindler said: "The younger generation views Judaism in strictly religious terms and finds unintelligible the stress on cultural, national, and defense-oriented Judaism of their parents." He called for a change of emphasis in Jewish education from an "ethnic to a religiously centered curriculum."

Rabbi Schindler spoke of the "loosening of the ethnic strains" which once bound the American Jewish Community and of the "compensating reinforcement of the religious bonds expected to serve as a unifying force in their stead. The secular culture or nationhood envisaged by many Jews a previous generation has proved illusory, incapable of fulfillment on the American scene; the community has become a communion, bound by belief, turning primarily to religion to define its nature and to justify its continuity."

Rabbi Schindler spoke of three Jewish factors which gave main impulse and momentum to this metamorphosis: the destruction of European Jewry; and the establishment of Israel. He also spoke of the impact of changes in Jewish life, because America does demand conformity as the price of acceptance.

He felt that this measure of required conformity "is greater than we think, far greater than America's professed adherence to the creed of cultural pluralism might lead us to expect. The American way of life is not so open that the divergent cultural components can easily be made a part of it.

"A jury of the majority rules; it is dominated by those who came here first; and they are not ready to accept that which clashes with their culture", he said. "Folkways fundamentally foreign to the American environment are quickly discarded by a minority which mean to escape its not-so-invisible ghetto."

Rabbi Schindler agreed that "certain elements of traditional group culture can be given public expression and then find public acceptance. But usually they are trivial traits, drawn from the surface of tradition . . . and about as far removed from tradition's genuine core as is 'Fiddler on the Roof' from Sholem Aleichem."

He underscored that the current curriculum of Jewish education does not take into account these changes. "Developed under the impact of the old community concept, it fails to meet the requirement of the new. It emphasizes the ethnic, rather than the religious; it focuses on outer form and not on inner faith."

Rabbi Schindler cited as examples: Bible taught as literature; history presented chiefly as the story of persecution, a story in which "God vanishes as a protagonist once we move from the Biblical to the Current Era," and Hebrew instruction which emphasizes linguistic competence rather than the transmission of belief.

As a first step Rabbi Schindler announced the Commission on Jewish Education of Reform Judaism, a joint body of the UAHC and Central Conference of American Rabbis, has directed its curriculum committee, chaired by Rabbi Samuel Glasner, of Baltimore, Maryland, to "summon a conference of Jewish theologians of diverse convictions, not necessarily to forge a unified Reform Jewish theology, but to agree on what we should teach our children in the realm of belief." He also said that the UAHC's Department of Education must begin producing new texts, new teachers' Guides, redirect the orientation of existing texts, and change the orientation of religious school teachers.

Rabbi Schindler agreed, "that this task will not be fulfilled overnight; only evolutions, not revolutions in education have a chance at success." He called upon the Reform Movement to mobilize the vast sums that will be needed to undertake such a program and reminded the Jewish educators that recently the Lutheran Church of America completed a new parish education program for which the Christian body spent 20 years of research and work at a cost of five million dollars and with a national staff of 41 full time educators.

TV Film Shows Early Period Of Hitler Barbarity

There have been so many horrifying real-life films on the bestiality of the Nazi concentration camps that at first thought it would not seem likely that a documentary drama could expand significantly on the record of agonizing genocide, says Jack Gould in the New York Times. "Nur Ein Tag" (Only One Day), proved how wrong the theory could be. The West German film production of a script by Gunther R. Lys, the German author who spent more than four years in a concentration camp, was an extraordinary film because it showed the early siege of the barbarity in especially vivid terms.

The day in question was twenty-four hours in a concentration camp in January, 1939, when the Hitler regime was only still beginning the mass roundup of Jews, Communists, and others of whom it arbitrarily disapproved.

What Mr. Lys provided was in the nature of a dry run of the slaughter to follow, the sadistic practices of a labor camp that still had time to go through the motions of pretending to some extent to be just a prison.

The central setting of "Only One Day" was the main prison yard where the elderly, ill, and the defiantly young performed such useless tasks as digging a huge ditch with their bare hands and then refilling it. But the photographs of the inmates, attired in prison garb and with heads shorn, was an unforgettable representation of untold thousands caught in a moment when a part of civilization was running amok and decent society was enjoying an uncomprehending doze.

The script by Mr. Lys, first shown in West Germany as part of the observance of the 20th anniversary of the end of World War II, suggested how mass extinction was almost the inevitable consequence of a state corralling so many of its citizens that it became a hopeless task in logistics to accommodate them with any degree of minimum humanity.

But the power of "Only One Day" also rested in the small vignettes that were incorporated with skillful understatement. There was a scene of a Nazi prison guard quietly discussing the problems of a father just after he had abused his fellow man in the prison.

There was a brief exchange between two Joseph prisoners caught in the doubt of wondering whether there was no alternative to submission. There was the closing scene of smug, well-to-do Germans enjoying the usual amenities of comfortable dining out, says the New York Times, and never hearing the early cries of the helpless in a neighboring prison.

JEWISH COMMUNITY SUFFERS TRAGIC LOSS IN AIRLINER DISASTER IN TOKYO

Among the nine Montrealers lost aboard the Canadian Pacific Airlines DC-8 which crashed at Tokyo International Airport on March 4 were: Mr. and Mrs. J. Julius Block and her sister, Miss Frances Kellert; and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph I. Stampleman.

The Jewish community of Montreal was deeply shocked by this tragic event which robbed the whole city of two of its most prominent citizens, Mr. Block, who was president of the Jewish General Hospital, and was associated with the Combined Jewish Appeal; the Canadian Red Cross; and the Canadian Cancer Society; and Mrs. Block, the former Miss Dorothy Rose Kellert, who was honorary president of the Women's Auxiliary of the Hospital; president of the Women's Federation of the Allied Jewish Community Services; and a life governor of the Maimonides Hospital and Home For the Aged; of the Jewish Hospital Of Hope; and of the Red Cross.

Mr. and Mrs. Block were born and educated in Montreal. Mr. Block had the well-being of the city at heart and had served as vice-chairman of the Red Cross Appeal, co-chairman of the Canadian Cancer Society's fund-raising campaigns; and as an actively interested participant in countless community projects. He was a member of the Shaar Hashomayim Synagogue; the Montefiore Club; and the Elmridge Golf and Country Club.

Mr. Block was president and board chairman of Bancroft Industries Ltd., distributors of aircraft and instrument supplies. He also was president of Block Equipment Corp. and a director of Hel-Quebec Ltd., Atlantic Helicopters Ltd., Columbia International Ltd., Canavia Corporation Ltd., and Colbourne Terminals Ltd. Mr. Block was a partner in Joy Aviation Regd. and was associated with Abbott Industries Ltd.

He was born in 1898 and was educated at Montreal High School and McGill University.

He served with the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps during the Second World War and was attached to the Army Salvage and Disposal Board.

Miss Frances Kellert, who was blind, was the frequent travelling companion of her sister and brother-in-law. Mr. and Mrs. John Julius Block had two sons-in-law and daughters: Mr. and Mrs. Jack R. Lazare (Marilyn), 36 Aberdeen Avenue, Montreal; and Dr. and Mrs. Robert O. Morgen (Sadye), of Houston, Texas; and six grandchildren: Jeffrey, and Leonard Lazare; and Sandra, Barbara, Richard, and Elizabeth Morgen. Mr. Block is survived by a brother, Myer Block; and three sisters, Misses Ethel, Rose, and Jennie Block; all of 481 Strathcona Avenue. Mrs. Block and Miss Kellert were the sisters of the late Mrs. Nathan Cummings (Ruth), of Chicago, Ill.

Mr. Block was to have been chairman at a dinner to celebrate the seventy-fifth birthday of Samuel Bronfman, which has been postponed until April.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph I. Stampleman, of 1460 MacGregor Avenue, Montreal, were returning from a three-week trip to the Orient. He was sixty-eight years of age and his wife was sixty-four. They were native Americans who had been Canadian citizens for thirty five years. Mr. Stampleman was a retired chairman of the board of Gillette Safety Razor of Canada Ltd.

He joined Gillette Sales Department in the United States on June 23, 1919, and was transferred to the Canadian branch of the firm in 1931. On May 23, 1938, he was appointed president and managing director of Gillette Canada, a position he held until January 1, 1961, when he was elected chairman of the board. He retired April 1, 1963, after having been forty-three years with the company.

A widely-known figure in Montreal and Canadian business circles and associations, Mr. Stampleman was a member of the Montreal Rotary Club; past president of Toilet Goods Manufacturers' Association; and a member of Shaar Hashomayim Synagogue; the Montefiore Club; and Elmridge Golf and Country Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Stampleman are survived by two sons: Robert Stampleman, account executive of the North Advertising Company of New York; and Arthur Stampleman, an officer of the Mercantile Bank of Canada; also, a grandson, David Scott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Stampleman, 5890 Dolbeau Avenue. Mrs. Stampleman (Bess) is survived by two sisters: Mrs. I. Davis (Rose); and Mrs. A. Davis (Elsie); of Birmingham, Alabama; and a brother, Abe Shugerman, of Gadsden, Alabama; and was the sister of the late Lee and the late Clement Shugerman. Mr. Stampleman is survived by a sister, Mrs. Helen Stevenson, of St. Petersburg, Florida; and a brother, Samuel Stampleman, of Miami, Florida; and was the brother of the late William and the late Jeffrey Stampleman.

SOLOMON S. GORDON, BELOVED FRIEND, COMPANION, TEACHER, AND GUIDING INFLUENCE, SHALOM AND FAREWELL

The Hebrew Culture Organization (Keren Hatarbut), of Montreal, held "An Evening Of Remembrance" for its late president, Solomon S. Gordon, at Adath Israel Synagogue. The speakers were: Rabbi Charles Bender, S. Dunsky, L. Kronitz, and Lionel J. Shine.

The following is the eulogy delivered at the funeral service by Haim Maizel, president-elect of Keren Hatarbut and Camp Massad, translated from the Hebrew:

At the bier of that dearest of men, president of Keren Hatarbut and Camp Massad, Solomon S. Gordon:

A Psalm of David: Lord, who will abide in your tabernacle? Who will dwell on your holy mountain? He that walks uprightly and does righteously and speaks the truth that is in his heart. There is no slander on his tongue, no evil to his fellow, no reproach to his neighbour. He despises what is vile, honours them that fear the Lord, and though he promise something to his disadvantage, will not change. He does not lend money at interest nor can he be bribed against the innocent. He that does these things shall never be moved. (Psalm XV).

This is how the ancient poet summarized the ideal of moral integrity for a Jew of his time, whose life and conduct were faithful to the fundamental precepts of his faith. We can add so many more of these divine attributes when we come to assess the stature and deeds of our dear friend, teacher, and companion, who is no longer with us.

We the members of Keren Hatarbut and Camp Massad, who worked so closely and intimately with him for decades, and were privileged to bask in his shining humanity, knew him as a friend and companion, a partner in our work, and as a Jew whose entire life was lived on the highest ethical plane.

A logical and perceptive mind, steeped in the Bible; a heart filled with love of Israel and love of his fellow man; dedicated to the Hebrew book and the Hebrew spirit, this was Solomon S. Gordon.

We never heard him raise his voice nor criticize others. He was slow to anger and quick to conciliate, a peacemaker and placator. He greeted every man cordially, and his friends as if he were receiving the Divine Presence. He judged every man for the good, respected all men and was always quick to come to their aid, lavishing charity openly and secretly, and above it all, a gentleness and humility beyond compare.

What a privilege it was to work with him, how pleasant it was to be in his company, and how elevating to engage him in conversation. All this is taken from us today, and we weep for our great loss; but the influence of his life and his memory will never leave us.

Rabbi Jochanan said: "The end of a man is death, the end of an animal is the slaughter, and all creatures are destined to die. Lucky is the man who grows up with the Torah, labours in the Torah, gives his Creator pleasure, builds a good name, and departs this world with a good name."

King Solomon said: "A good name is better than precious oil, and the day of death better than the day of birth."

All this applies in full measure to Solomon S. Gordon, our beloved friend, companion, teacher, and guiding influence. Shalom and farewell.

MR. NURENBERGER'S "LITTLE TEMPEST IN A TEA POT"

Under the heading: "Controversy Kept Quiet, Canadian Jews Resent Penitent-Germany Portrayal," Andrew Webster, of the Toronto Globe and Mail, reported:

The Jewish communities of Toronto and Montreal have been jarred by the publication in a prominent Canadian Jewish weekly of a supplement devoted to modern Germany.

Critics have charged that the 28-page supplement, appearing in the Jan. 28 issue of the Toronto-based Canadian Jewish News, was lenient and indulgent in its portrayal of a West German state eagerly seeking to atone for German crimes against Jews during the Hitler regime.

Agitation over the issue has so far remained submerged because of reluctance on the part of Jewish leaders to discuss it openly.

The Canadian Jewish Congress says it is not prepared to debate the controversy. However, the Congress felt strongly enough about the supplement to issue a statement two weeks ago, never released to the press, declaring that the News "does not represent the views of the Canadian Jewish Congress or any of its constituent organizations."

The statement was distributed to Jewish organizations and was printed in a rival, Montreal-based weekly, the Canadian Jewish Review. It did not refer to the subject matter of the supplement.

One Jewish spokesman, stated: "The issue is simple. In this supplement there is hardly any indication that in Germany today Nazism, or neo-Nazism, is of any significance. Moreover, there is no indication that the attitude there toward war criminals is somewhat less than satisfactory. It paints everything in glowing terms."

Other critics found it offensive that the supplement relied heavily on advertising from large German industrial firms and some state-owned enterprises. One well-known Toronto rabbi, who did not wish to get embroiled in the controversy, said: "It looked almost like a house organ of the West German Government."

M. J. Nurenberger, editor and publisher of the News and author of its major article supporting a German-Jewish rapprochement, is a short, pugnacious-looking man who appears to relish controversy.

He vigorously defends the publication of the supplement. "Never did I say we should erase the past or forgive and forget," he says. And he points to a passage in his article stating: "Justice demands that those guilty be prosecuted until every killer is dealt with according to the laws of God and man."

The article also cited "the relentless West German effort to ferret out war criminals." Although conceding that German-Jewish relations are "clouded by an atmosphere of a peculiar neurosis that only time can heal," it also speaks of many Germans seeking atonement for what happened during the war.

Countering criticism of the article, Mr. Nurenberger, an Orthodox Jew, says that neo-Nazism is not limited to Germany. The advertisements, he claims, were given to the paper by a Canadian advertising agency. And he says that during a three-week tour of Germany collecting material for the supplement, he never once spoke to German officials about advertisements.

"The Canadian Jewish News paid all my expenses."

The only religious spokesman willing to comment on the supplement, Rabbi Nachum Rabinovitch, of Clanton Park Synagogue, says some people are understandably sensitive about Germany. Any forthright advertising on behalf of German enterprise, he adds, is bound to make people feel uncomfortable.

"What he (Mr. Nurenberger) has done is present some facts about Western Germany with an attempt to show that there is a concern for changing the German image in the world."

The News is clearly out of favor among the Jewish establishment in Toronto, some of whose members describe it as parochial.

But Rabbi Rabinovitch says: "It's a lively newspaper and occasionally he (Mr. Nurenberger) creates little tempests in a teapot by taking very independent stands and by not allowing any holy cows."

SORROW FOR MONTREAL

The Montreal Gazette says: The aircrash in Tokyo has brought sorrow to this city. There are a number of Montreal families by whom the day will be remembered as one of tragic loss.

The Jewish community of Montreal has lost some of its prominent members. Mr. J. Julius Block had given leadership to the community in many ways, above all as president of the Jewish General Hospital. A member of the board of the hospital for many years, he had brought to the presidency a thorough knowledge of its services and problems.

At the last annual meeting he had reported the record figures for patients admitted, and described the demands being made upon the hospital. He announced that plans had been completed for a major expansion, which would provide for an addition of more than 250 beds, and provide both for the enlargement of existing services, and the creation of new.

His leadership in the work of the hospital, based on his long experience with its work and needs, will be greatly missed, as will be his friendly personality and his general spirit of helpfulness. Mr Block had served the community in many other ways, notably on campaigns of the Red Cross and the Canadian Cancer Society. Mrs. Block, who was also active in the life of the community, perished with him in the plane crash.

The Jewish community has also suffered the loss of Mr. Joseph I. Stampleman, the retired chairman of the board of Gillette Safety Razor of Canada Limited. For many years — from 1938 to 1961—he was president and managing director of the company, and had been with the company 43 years, when he retired as chairman of the board in 1963. Mr. Stampleman, and his wife, who also died in the crash, were Americans, who had identified themselves completely with Canada as their adopted country; both had been Canadian citizens for 35 years.

Though the tragedy in the airport at Tokyo took place far away, it has come very close, in the sorrow it has brought to Montreal homes.
